Cal Jr. watched his dad put on some butterfly bandages, then saw him head back to the plow to finish the job. "When I get the feeling that things are a little low, that I need a little motivation to work on my hitting, I visualize the tractor-crank story. That pushes me," Cal Ripken said in the midst of his streak. "I think of that story more than any other. Sometimes I'm beating my head against the wall and not getting any results at the plate, and I'm wondering if my effort is worth it all. That story sums it all up for me."

instead went into retirement.

In 1987, Ripken Sr. became the first father ever to manage two sons simultaneously in the majors. Cal was the midst of a major league record consecutive games streak that would extend to 2,632 games. Bill was the Orioles' second baseman.

Ripken Sr. was fired after the Orioles opened the 1988 season with six straight losses in what would be ultimately a record 21-game losing streak. He eventually returned to his old role as third-base coach and maintained the position through the end of the 1992 season. "The Orioles have lost someone who meant a lot to this organization for a very long time," general manager Frank Wren said in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., where the team is holding spring training. Ripken Sr. began his career with the Orioles as a catcher with the team's Phoenix affiliate in 1957. He ended his undistinguished playing career in 1964, having never reached the major leagues.

His 13-plus years in the Baltimore farm system is the longest tenure of any minor league manager in Oriole history. During that time, Ripken Sr. worked odd jobs over the winter because baseball didn't pay him enough to support a family of six.

He often brought his boys to the ballpark but left most of the development of the family's four children to their mother, Vi. "It was just as if their father was a truck driver — he was away from home a lot, and you just had to live with it," Vi Ripken said. "I resented baseball for taking away my father," Cal Jr. once said. "Baseball didn't allow him to spend much time with me when I was growing up." They made up for lost time when Cal Jr. joined the team in 1981 and Bill come aboard in 1987. At the time, Cal Sr. downplayed his unique baseball association with his boys. But he said it would "We just happen to be in the same business at years from now, when I'm reflecting upon things in my rocking chair, I'll smile about all this. But for now they're just a second baseman and a shortstop on this ballclub." Cal Jr., who left spring training on Tuesday to be
